Bio

Patricia Anderson joined Luvera Law Firm in 1997.

Most recently, this summer she and David Beninger partnered on two jury trials and a private arbitration achieving $58 million for clients, including a \$40 million settlement for ground victims of the KOMO helicopter crash after five weeks of trial, and an $8 million jury verdict after two weeks of trial for injuries to a man hit in a crosswalk by a negligent driver. Their recent work also includes a \$38.25 million jury verdict for a bicyclist hit by a valet driver; a $12 million private arbitration award for the death of a former police chief and injuries to his wife from a car crash; a $10.6 million private arbitration award for a 27-year-old man hit in a crosswalk by a semi-truck; and a $6 million settlement for an electrical brain injury to a worker electrocuted by overhead powerlines on a roadway construction site.

Anderson serves on the board of directors for the Washington Association for Justice and WSAJ's Amicus Foundation, Judicial Relations Committee, and Awards Committee, writes articles for Trial News, presents at continuing legal education seminars, and teaches trial advocacy in Steve Fury's Trial Skills program for young lawyers. In addition to the WSAJ, her professional memberships include the American Association for Justice, American Bar Association, King County Bar Association, and the Washington State Bar Association.

She's a past board member of Little Bit Therapeutic Riding Center, past president and board member of the Denny Creek Neighborhood Alliance environmental advocacy group, and was a founding member of Amnesty International Group 624.

After graduating magna cum laude from Whitworth College, Anderson obtained her J.D. from Seattle University School of Law with honors in 1987. She is a graduate of the Gerry Spence Trial Lawyers College.

She and her husband have deep roots in the Pacific Northwest where they raised their two sons. They enjoy their dogs, hiking, camping, bicycling, kayaking, fishing, and exploring the shores and waters of the Puget Sound.
